

My name is Polina Sybirtseva and I am Ukrainian who is currently studying for a master's degree in law in Taiwan. I want to share my own experience with Ukrainian students who are now faced with a difficult choice of further education after receiving a bachelor of law in Ukraine.

While I was still getting my bachelor's degree in Ukraine, I was already thinking about the future prospects of studying for a master's degree abroad. I was filled with the desire to explore new horizons and expand my academic and cultural experience.

It was at this time that I learned that a friend of mine had a similar experience, but had already started his education at National Yang Ming Chiao Tung University (NYCU) in Taiwan. Their vivid account of the time spent at university in Taiwan, combined with the discovery that Ukrainians have already achieved success in various disciplines there, ignited a spark in me.

As for me, Taiwan is an ideal country for such studying and gaining new knowledge, offering me a mixture of academic excellence and cultural richness. All in all, I made the decision to enroll in a Master of Laws in Taiwan, confident that the experience I gained here would be invaluable in shaping my professional trajectory.

I chose a master's degree in law because this profession is really promising. In Ukraine, I already received an education in this field, and continuing my studies abroad allows me to deepen my knowledge and gain new skills. Studying at NYCU provides a unique opportunity to study law from a different angle and compare it with the Ukrainian system.

From the first days of my stay at the university, I received incredible support from the department. Teachers and administration are always ready to help, answer any questions and provide the necessary advice.

At the moment, I am finishing my first year of study at this university and I can already draw certain conclusions. When you first come to Taiwan and start studying here, you face the problem of adapting to a new environment and a new education system. In the first semester, I especially felt the sadness of my homeland and my relatives, and it was also difficult to get used to the education system, which was different from the Ukrainian one. But later, already in the second semester, thanks to the university, department and teachers, I perfectly adapted to the culture, education and life in a new country in general.

The university gladly supports your adaptation as a foreign student to a new country and new environment. The university regularly organizes various events that allow students from different countries to exchange experience and knowledge.

Although I had previous experience studying in English, my experience was quite different from studying law in that language. In any case, in my opinion, it is not necessary to have a high level of command of the language in order to learn English.

It is necessary to have an understanding of legal terminology and the ability to analyze well the information received in the lessons.

Also, living in another country where they speak a new language for you, it is important to basically understand this "new" language for you. At our university, all international students have a great chance to enhance their Chinese skills through a variety of avenues, including language classes, as well as engaging in different events and conversation groups.

The experience gained while studying in Taiwan is invaluable. This is not only academic knowledge, but also practical skills that will be useful in the future career. I am sure that this experience will help me to be competitive in the labor market and will contribute to my professional growth in future.

I believe that a master's degree in law in Taiwan is a great prospect for Ukrainian students who have obtained a bachelor's degree in this field. Taiwan provides ample opportunities for professional development, and I am sure that anyone who chooses this path will not regret their choice.

I hope that my experience will help students from Ukraine and other countries of the world, who dream of an international career in the field of law, to consider Taiwan as a possible place to obtain a master's degree. This is not only a study, but also an incredible experience that will change your life for the better.
